

In the late Middle Ages a nightshirt with a slit for sexual intercourse was widely used in Europe. This garment ensured that married couples did not have to show themselves naked to each other during sex.